Stryker Japanese Awards dinner

Venue: Doltone House

Audience: 300

For a clean, elegant yet striking (pardon the pun) awards event it is hard to go past the recent Stryker Japanese Awards Dinner staged at Doltone house.

An international audience of 300 gathered to celebrate this annual event for Stryker Japan – a worldwide group operating in the medical industry. Haycom worked alongside both Stryker and Jigsaw – a London-based production company – to deliver technical event solutions for this grand event.

Dealing with two different companies from different cultural backgrounds could be expected to introduce some potential communication issues. Such was not the case, with the event going smoothly from start to finish due, in no small part, to the project management skills of Matt Kenny and the people skills of Olivia Wilson from our Haycom Sydney office.

A dedicated team was assigned to this event to ensure the whole process was seamless and hassle free. Matt and Olivia were assisted by Steve Leiter (lighting), Rodney Apps (vision), Luke Hutchins and Steve King (sound) and a cast of support crew who covered every minute detail.

This approach of forming a dedicated team to each event, utilising specific and appropriate skill sets, is behind the confidence and success that Haycom brings to all events.

This event entailed a number of stage set changes which needed to be planned and coordinated to the minute. This absolute attention to detail by the entire project team ensure the show, from the audience perspective, was smooth and totally professional throughout.

Matt's project management skills have been developed during 20 years in the events industry. He is an expert in translating client communication requirements into achievable, effective technical solutions and is a specialist in the technical management of large-scale presentations and multi-site events.
